HSBC
Asset Management

Objective and investment policy

The objective of the mutual fund is to offer flexible management on equity and fixed-income markets over a minimum investment period of five years. For information purposes, exposure to equity markets is between 20% and 80% of assets and the exposure to fixed-income markets, between 0% and 80% of assets. The mutual fund exposes in developed markets with a euro bias as well as in emerging markets.

The mutual fund is managed actively without any reference to a benchmark index.

The investment strategy is discretionary and is based on a portfolio management process organised around three pillars:

- a medium/long-term strategic asset allocation depending on the manager's level of conviction (asset classes, geographical areas, sectors),
- a tactical allocation resulting from the manager's short-term convictions in order to strive to take advantage of market opportunities,
- a selection of undertakings for collective investment (UCI) and managers able to, according to us, generate performance over time.

Risk and Reward Profile

Do not run any unnecessary risk. Read the Key Information Document (KID).

The risk and reward indicator is based on price volatility over the last five years, and is an indicator of absolute risk. Historical data may not be a reliable indication for the future. The value of an investment, and any income from it, may fall as well as rise, and you may not get back the amount you originally invested. The category is not guaranteed to remain unchanged and the categorisation may shift over time. The lowest category does not mean a risk-free investment. This Mutual Fund is classified in category 3 because its price or simulated data has shown low to medium fluctuations historically.

Fund Manager Commentary

Economic Environment

Capital markets remain driven by tariff talks between the United States and its main trading partners, including Europe, China and many emerging countries, in an attempt to reach an agreement with the American President. Global stock markets continued the rebound that began mid-April after Donald Trump announced a 90-day pause in the implementation of reciprocal tariffs.

On the economic front, leading indicators within industry and services in the United States, as well as U.S. consumer confidence surveys, began to rise after the downward trend observed in recent months. In early May, the US Federal Reserve chose to keep its key rates within the 4.25-4.5% range owing to the lack of short-term visibility on inflation caused by future tariffs.

In the Eurozone, activity remains sluggish, and expectations have been lowered in services, with the PMI index at its weakest in 16 months, on account of France and Germany in particular. The European Commission has also revised its growth forecasts for the Eurozone down to +0.9% in 2025 and +1.4% in 2026 (vs. earlier forecasts of +1.3% and +1.6%).

Global equities rose 5.9% in euros, driven by U.S. equities (+6.5%) while emerging equities lagged the market (+4.4% in euros). U.S. rates rebounded during the month from 4.15% to 4.4%, hitting a high at 4.6%, which also lifted rates in other countries. Yields on 10-year German bonds rose 6bps to 2.5%.

Performance & current holdings

Our underexposure to equity markets during the month detracted from the fund's monthly performance. Following a robust corporate earnings season, we have adopted a less cautious view on equities. Our regional allocation, favouring Europe over the United States and emerging markets proved unfavourable. In Europe, outperformance once again stemmed from our country choices, and notably our overexposure to Spain and Italy and our under-exposure to France. In terms of allocation by style, our small-cap investments contributed positively, while our defensive position in low-volatility stocks detracted from performance.

In the U.S., under-performing low-volatility stocks were partly offset by our positions in trend-following and growth stocks. After a robust Q1 earnings season, we have continued to strengthen our exposure to growth stocks. In the emerging space, the portfolio has benefited from its underexposure to Thailand in favour of China. Our funds invested in long-term growth themes performed in line with global indices. We have strengthened our exposure to the strategy invested in defence stocks.

Our funds invested in long-term growth themes performed in line with global indices. We have strengthened our exposure to the strategy invested in defence stocks.

Within our fixed income investments, those with the strongest ties to U.S. debt underperformed. Our preference for Eurozone debt was helpful to performance. We have introduced a new position in Spanish debt. The strategies exposed to private debt benefited from declining credit premiums. We have strengthened our exposure to European credit by selling international credit. Finally, once again, our diversification into hedge funds detracted from performance this month.

Outlook

We expect growth to converge in major economies, inflation to remain slightly above its long-term trend, and monetary easing to continue at a gradual pace. The slowdown in growth and the relative under-performance of U.S. assets (equities, bonds, U.S. dollar) suggest the end of "U.S. exceptionalism" and a return to assets that are still trading at a discount (European and emerging equities).

Within our equity investments, we have therefore maintained a cautious exposure with a slight preference for European markets over Japanese and U.S. equities. In the United States, we favour low-volatility and growth stocks. We are steering clear of small caps as their profitability remains insufficient.

In the Eurozone, our exposure is well-balanced with a bias in favour of value and small caps. Within the latter segment, we prefer German companies. Finally, in emerging markets, diversification remains sizeable, and we favour China, Poland, and Latin America.

Considering the slowdown in global growth, heightened political tensions, and central banks pursuing their rate cutting cycles, we have maintained a positive stance on sovereign debt. Owing to lower inflationary risks and a more accommodative central bank, we prefer European issuances to their U.S. counterparts. We are well positioned on corporate bonds, even though valuations are stretched. We favour investment-grade bonds, as well as financial debt.
