HSBC SELECT FLEXIBLE (A)

Monthly Report
February 2025

Objective and investment policy

The objective of the mutual fund is to offer flexible management on equity and fixed-income markets over a minimum investment period of five years. For information purposes, exposure to equity markets is between 20% and 80% of assets and the exposure to fixed-income markets, between 0% and 80% of assets. The mutual fund exposes in developed markets with a euro bias as well as in emerging markets.

The mutual fund is managed actively without any reference to a benchmark index.

The investment strategy is discretionary and is based on a portfolio management process organised around three pillars:

- a medium/long-term strategic asset allocation depending on the manager's level of conviction (asset classes, geographical areas, sectors),
- a tactical allocation resulting from the manager's short-term convictions in order to strive to take advantage of market opportunities,
- a selection of undertakings for collective investment (UCI) and managers able to, according to us, generate performance over time.

Risk and Reward Profile

Do not run any unnecessary risk. Read the Key Information Document (KID).

The risk and reward indicator is based on price volatility over the last five years, and is an indicator of absolute risk. Historical data may not be a reliable indication for the future. The value of an investment, and any income from it, may fall as well as rise, and you may not get back the amount you originally invested. The category is not guaranteed to remain unchanged and the categorisation may shift over time. The lowest category does not mean a risk-free investment. This Mutual Fund is classified in category 3 because its price or simulated data has shown low to medium fluctuations historically.

Fund Manager Commentary

Economic Environment

Unfazed the lack of political visibility, financial markets focused on macroeconomic data and robust earnings publications. Equity markets delivered mixed returns in February: the global index retreated by 0.36% in euros, while the Eurozone and emerging markets both outperformed (the latter to a lesser extent), returning +3.48% and +0.72% respectively, in euros.

In the United States, growth seems to be losing momentum, particularly in terms of confidence indicators. Meanwhile, January inflation readings remained stubborn, with prices rising +3% year-on-year. In the Eurozone, while growth remains sluggish (+0.1% GDP growth in the 4th quarter), the momentum appears to be recovering in industrial sectors. Inflation edged up in January, with prices rising 2.7% year-on-year.

Yields fell back slightly, as rates served as a safe haven in the face of volatility and geopolitical tensions. Yields on 10-year U.S. Treasury bonds retreated 30 basis points. Supported by an improved economic momentum, European rates eased rather less with 10-year yields on German Bunds down 10 basis points to 2.4%.

Performance & current holdings

Our overexposure to equity markets at the beginning of the month and our profit-taking contributed positively to the fund's performance in February.

Our regional equity allocation favours the U.S. and Europe over emerging markets and Japan and therefore made a very modest contribution to performance: gains from our over-exposure to Europe and under-exposure to Japan were offset by our exposure to the U.S. market and our lower positioning in emerging markets. These geographical biases were reduced at the end of the month.

In Europe, outperformance stemmed from our country choices, and notably our overexposure to Southern Europe (Spain, Italy). We took partial profits on under-valued stocks and invested the proceeds in index-linked strategies. In the United States, our decision to sell our positions in small-caps proved wise. We have also trimmed growth stocks to increase our allocation to low volatility stocks.

On the emerging side, we benefited from our overexposure to the Chinese market. We are selling our positions in Turkish equities to strengthen Poland and global emerging markets. Our funds exposed to long-term growth themes outperformed global indices, but artificial intelligence-related themes weighed on performance. These thematic strategies have been reduced in favour of funds better aligned with societal changes (Amundi MSCI Millenials).

Within our fixed income investments, we benefited from low credit premiums in absolute terms. Our preference for U.S. sovereign debt over German debt was helpful to performance. After recent inflation readings surprised on the upside, we took profits on this theme. Finally, our diversification into commodities detracted from performance.

Outlook

We expect a moderate slowdown in U.S. economic activity in 2025, while other developed economies should experience a very gradual recovery, particularly the Eurozone. China could also stabilise its economy at around 5% growth.

The market remains robust, supported by strong growth prospects in the U.S. and upbeat fourth-quarter earnings publications. The AI theme is still a growth factor, but the risks of new technological disruptions could lower the expected return on investments already deployed. As a result, investors are justifiably wary of richly valued technology stocks.

Furthermore, tariff threats have not had a major impact on risk assets for the time being, as Eurozone equities have outperformed and the recent rebound in inflation is still considered "seasonal" and driven by specific factors. However, geopolitical risks seem to be increasing and warrant a degree of vigilance after a good start to the year.

Within our equity investments, we have a marginal preference for developed over emerging markets. In the United States, we have reduced our exposure to growth stocks, while in the Eurozone, our allocation is evenly split between undervalued, growth and defensive stocks. Finally, in emerging markets, diversification remains sizeable, and we favour China and Poland.

Considering the moderate slowdown in global growth, poor political visibility, and central banks pursuing their rate cutting cycles, we have maintained a modest positive stance on sovereign yields. The main risk is a resurgence of inflation, particularly in the United States, a factor that calls for our vigilance.

We are well positioned on corporate bonds, even though valuations are stretched. We favour European investment grade and high-yield bonds over their U.S. counterparts, as well as financial debt.
